Introduction¹

The United Nations was founded as a global pact among states, but over the decades – in the name of transparency and openness, and in order to further the aim of globalization – the UN has opened its doors to non-governmental organizations. More than 6,200 NGOs have been invited to participate on a year-round basis in UN activities, and have thus been handed a coveted global megaphone. An examination of these NGOs, however, reveals that both by design and gross negligence on the part of UN member states, the NGOs' ranks include bigots, antisemites, and terrorist advocates who are now spreading hatred and inciting violence from the world stage.

Democratic states, led by the United States, control the purse strings of the United Nations either from within the UN bureaucracy or through domestic policy. Getting serious about combating the spread of intolerance and violent extremism means putting an immediate stop to the use and abuse of the United Nations to broadcast and support xenophobia and its lethal consequences.

In theory, the UN has processes for accreditation that share a common requirement: respect for the purposes and principles of the UN itself. In order to qualify for accreditation or association, NGOs must operate in conformity with, or promote, the UN Charter. They must affirm “faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small.”

In practice, accredited non-governmental organizations have been allowed to flaunt the core of the UN mission by advocating terror and intolerance. At the same time, they have been permitted to draw closer to the world of international diplomacy and gain access to the international media platforms associated with it.

Most striking for an organization founded on the ashes of the Holocaust, the UN enables its accredited NGOs to play a central role in promoting modern antisemitism. Although the preamble of the UN Charter promises the equal rights of nations large and small, UN-accredited NGOs foster the destruction of the UN member state of Israel.

The benefits of UN accreditation for NGOs are tangible and significant. UN-accredited NGOs are able to secure meeting space within UN buildings to sponsor speakers, mount exhibits, and screen films, all within immediate proximity to the world's press. Major media organizations from across the planet have in-house office space at UN headquarters in New York and Geneva. NGOs can speak at important UN meetings and have their words translated and broadcast globally via UN webcasts, which are then archived for the public, researchers, and students from elementary schools to college campuses.

UN-accredited NGOs can submit written statements to UN bodies that are assigned official UN symbol numbers, posted on UN websites, and archived in searchable formats for the global community. More recently, UN websites have started linking directly to NGO websites, greatly enhancing traffic to the NGO websites and the promulgation of the NGOs' messages. UN-accredited NGOs are also invited to attend negotiating sessions and decision-making forums, thereby gaining access to the world's diplomatic corps, with the attendant opportunities for influence.

The links between UN-accredited NGOs and the promotion of terrorism and hatred – including, in particular, antisemitism – violate the terms and conditions of these NGOs’ accreditation. In some cases, these NGOs were originally accredited by UN bodies in spite of these links. In other cases, while these links may have developed after the original accreditation processes, UN bodies – including those that conduct periodic review processes – permit such NGOs to retain their UN status while violating the fundamental principles of the institution.

Scattered around the UN system are a few disclaimers of responsibility for the content of NGO events held on UN premises or NGO websites to which UN websites link directly. But NGO events held on UN premises are permitted only after detailed applications are made to UN bodies or staff; NGO website links are selectively posted on UN sites by UN officials; and, in some cases, NGOs are singled out and given valuable speaking slots by UN bodies or staff. The UN cannot simply wash its hands of any responsibility, since its own selection and approval procedures belie any claims that UN officials are ignorant of NGOs’ purposes and content.

Furthermore, the buck stops with UN member states who are charged with the responsibility of awarding or continuing UN accreditation for NGOs in the first place. The states running the UN accreditation processes, however, are frequently countries that inhibit free speech and curtail the freedom of association in their own backyards. They use their UN powers to protect themselves in the international sphere. Current members of the most prolific UN NGO accreditation operation include such NGO-abusing states as China, Cuba, Iran, Russia, Turkey, Sudan, and Venezuela. Turkey and Sudan are currently Vice-Chairs.

In practice, this means UN member states both delay or deny accreditation to the right NGOs, and grant accreditation to the wrong NGOs. The terrorist advocates. The haters. The antisemites.

Hypocritically, NGOs constantly clamor for greater access to all manner of UN goings-on, but refuse to police themselves. On the contrary, the common mantra among NGOs is that of promoting “the voices of the victims” – where victimhood is quite deliberately self-defined, regardless of the legitimacy of these claims.

Once gained, UN status is highly unlikely to be revoked. Processes for reporting and reviewing NGOs following accreditation are almost always mere formalities. There is little appetite for changing this feature from any quarter, given the potential for abuse by states without freedom of association.

In contrast to the UN’s enabling activities, domestic legislatures, social media corporations, and funding agencies in democratic states claim to have new insight into the dangers posed by hate speech and incitement to terrorism and violence. Whether as a result of litigation from the victims of terror, or belated recognition of the deadly nexus between incitement and terror, there is growing motivation by many parties to stop broadcasting incitement.

In the United States, the *Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2017*² requires the Secretary of State to report the steps taken by the Palestinian Authority (PA) to combat incitement against Israelis. There is also a burgeoning array of proposed legislation: the *Countering Anti-Semitism and Anti-Israel Activities at the United Nations Act of 2017*³ would withhold U.S. funding from the UN unless the President certifies that no

UN agency accredits any NGO that promotes antisemitism; the *Taylor Force Act*⁴ would cut U.S. funding to the PA unless the Secretary of State certifies that the PA has publicly condemned terror attacks; the *Condemning hate crime and any other form of racism, religious or ethnic bias, discrimination, incitement to violence, or animus targeting a minority in the United States bill*⁵ would condemn all incitement to violence against minorities in the U.S.; the *Condemning Palestinian incitement and reaffirming the special bond between Israel and the United States bill*⁶ and the proposed *End Subsidizing Palestinian Terrorism Act*⁷ would call on PA leader Mahmoud Abbas and the international community to condemn publicly incitement to violence against Israelis; the *Condemning fear-mongering, racism, anti-Semitism, bigotry, and violence perpetrated by hate groups bill*⁸ would condemn incitement to violence by white supremacist groups; the *Combating European Anti-Semitism Act of 2017*⁹ would call on the State Department to continue documenting antisemitic incitement in Europe; the *PLO Accountability Act of 2017*¹⁰ would call for the closing of the office of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) in Washington D.C. unless the President certifies that the PLO and PA have stopped incitement against the U.S. and Israel; the *Promoting Equality and Accountability at the United Nations Act of 2017*¹¹ would withhold U.S. payments to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) unless the Secretary of State certifies that no UNRWA teacher or school is inciting antisemitism or anti-American hate.

Beyond the United States, for instance, in 2017 the Swiss government tightened its oversight of the funding of NGOs in the Middle East that incite hate against Jews and Israel.¹² In June 2017, Denmark¹³ and Norway¹⁴ withdrew funding from a Palestinian NGO that named a youth center after a Palestinian terrorist. world, Facebook, claims to be improving its processes for removing terror-related content¹⁶and deletes 66,000 hate posts¹⁷ a week.

But just as governments, and even corporations are moving to curtail the dissemination of hatred and incitement to violence, the United Nations is moving in the opposite direction. Posting antisemitic and pro-terror content on Facebook does not bar NGOs from receiving or maintaining UN accreditation. On the contrary, the UN grants UN-accreditation to NGOs that it knows spout antisemitism and promote terror, hands them a UN platform, and disseminates their hate speech and violence-inducing rhetoric from its globally-connected website.

There are numerous examples of UN-accredited NGOs engaging in antisemitism, promoting violence and terror, demonizing the UN member state of Israel, and advocating the destruction of the Jewish state. Since many of the examples provided in our first report in September of 2016 are still promulgated by UN NGOs or available on the UN website, this report should be read in conjunction with the earlier report. All of the examples herein were distributed in 2017, regardless of when the materials were first disseminated. Screenshots of the sources are provided for every entry.

Our examples are drawn from a variety of sources:

- the websites and other online presences of UN-accredited NGOs,
- statements made by UN-accredited NGOs at UN events,
- materials distributed by UN-accredited NGOs on UN premises, and
- material that is not only found on UN-accredited NGO websites but that is trumpeted via direct links located on UN websites.

Examples from UN-accredited NGOs include:

- “Zionists have consistently displayed a full contempt and racist hatred of the ‘other’ that translates into the murder and maiming of children”
- “Forgotten is the Israeli Holocaust against Palestinians that began in 1948 when three quarters of a million civilians were systematically ethnically cleansed...This Holocaust has continued unceasingly to this day...”
- “the Israeli State’s Zionist ideology, which aims to establish a Jewish majority in historic Palestine through colonisation, ethnic cleansing, and the systematic oppression and domination of non-Jews...”
- “[W]hy do the US and Israel insist on inaccurately characterizing Hamas as a ‘terrorist’ organization?...The Hamas Charter, issued in 1988, called for one large Islamic Palestine in the pre-1948 borders, in which Muslims, Christians and Jews would live together in harmony.”
- “Zionist Jews have gone as far as pursuing the policy of their own oppressors, the Nazis.”
- “an occupying racist power ruled by the racist Talmud is not a state for Jews to be proud of. This racist state has the very seeds for self destruction like all apartheid regimes that fell apart.”

- “The people who rose up in the first Intifada began the task of liberation; it is our responsibility to join with our Palestinian colleagues to formulate the most effective strategies possible to turn their resistance into genuine liberation.”
- “Palestinians, like any other people, have the right to resist foreign domination, exploitation, oppression and occupation ‘...by all available means including armed struggle.’”
- “In March 1948, Zionist terrorists began a pre-planned, brutal campaign of ethnic cleansing forcing Palestinians from their land in order to create a Jewish majority.”

The sampling in this report has been divided into four general categories: (1) inciting hate or encouraging antisemitism, (2) condoning or justifying violence and terror, (3) demonizing the state of Israel, and (4) delegitimizing the state of Israel and seeking the destruction of the Jewish state. At the same time, these broad groupings and the malevolent campaigns of UN-accredited NGOs evidenced therein, are clearly interrelated and, hence, overlap. There are straight lines between modern antisemitism and “boycott, divestment and sanctions (BDS)” efforts, between demonizing Israel and delegitimizing the existence of the Jewish state, between inciting hatred and producing terror.

UN member states who underwrite the United Nations are currently underwriting a burgeoning global network of intolerance and incitement to violent extremism. They have the power and the duty – in the name of the very foundation of the United Nations – to put an end to this affront to the dignity of every human being and the equality of nations large and small.

The Rules

I. What are UN NGOs?

Generally, UN accreditation or association is done either through the Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) or the Department of Public Information (DPI). In the case of Israeli-related matters, it can also be acquired through the Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (CEIRPP).

The qualifier for UN-NGO accreditation is that “the aims and purposes of the organization shall be in conformity with the spirit, purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations” - in the case of ECOSOC accreditation; “support and respect the principles of the Charter of the United Nations” - in the case of DPI association; and “support the Charter of the United Nations” - in the case of accreditation by the CEIRPP.

II. Ways to Get Accreditation or Association

A. Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) “accreditation”

There are three categories of ECOSOC accreditation available to NGOs: general consultative status, special consultative status, and roster.

How to get accreditation:

The application mainly consists of disclosing any funding from governments, submitting examples of publications, and describing the aims of the organization and examples of activities pursued by the organization, as well as providing a statement of the anticipated future contribution to ECOSOC. An application is then reviewed and approved by the UN Committee on NGOs (composed of 19 member states). Current membership of the Committee includes states which systematically limit the rights of NGOs, such as: China, Iran, Russia, Sudan, Turkey and Venezuela. The Committee’s recommendation is forwarded to ECOSOC (composed of 54 UN member states), which then makes a final decision. Current membership in ECOSOC includes states with poor to non-existent protection for independent NGOs, such as: Afghanistan, Algeria, Burkina Faso, China, Lebanon, Pakistan, and Somalia.

In 2017 there are 4,990 ECOSOC-accredited NGOs.

1. General Consultative Status

Resolution 1996/31

“22. Organizations that are concerned with most of the activities of the Council and its subsidiary bodies and can demonstrate to the satisfaction of the Council that they have substantive and sustained contributions to make to the achievement of the objectives of the United Nations... shall be known as organizations in general consultative status.”

2. Special Consultative Status

Resolution 1996/31

“23. Organizations that have a special competence in, and are concerned specifically with, only a few of the fields of activity covered by the Council and its subsidiary bodies... shall be known as organizations in special consultative status...”

25. Organizations to be accorded special consultative status because of their interest in the field of human rights should pursue the goals of promotion and protection of human rights in accordance with the spirit of the Charter of the United Nations, the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the Vienna Declaration and Programme of Action.”

3. The Roster

Resolution 1996/31

“24. Other organizations that do not have general or special consultative status but that the Council, or the Secretary-General of the United Nations in consultation with the Council or its Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations, considers can make occasional and useful contributions to the work of the Council or its subsidiary bodies or other United Nations bodies within their competence shall be included in a list (to be known as the Roster).”

B. Department of Public Information (DPI) “association”

How to get association:

Association with DPI “...requires having effective information programmes in place and the ability and means to disseminate information about the work of the United Nations.” The application generally consists of establishing non-profit status, providing evidence that the organization has circulated information related to the work of the United Nations, and supplying recommendations.

Resolution 1297 \(XLIV\)

In 1968, the Economic and Social Council called on DPI to associate NGOs, bearing in mind the letter and spirit of its Resolution 1296 (XLIV) which stated that an NGO “...shall undertake to support the work of the United Nations and to promote knowledge of its principles and activities, in accordance with its own aims and purposes and the nature and scope of its competence and activities.”

Applications are first sent to the UN Information Centre (UNIC) covering the country where the NGO is based. The UNIC makes a recommendation to the UN NGO Relations Office at UN Headquarters. The NGO Relations Office presents the application to the UN DPI Committee on NGOs (composed of members of the UN secretariat), which then makes the final decision.

In 2017 there are 1,407 NGOs associated with DPI.

C. Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (CEIRPP) “accreditation”

There are two categories of accreditation available to NGOs from the CEIRPP: “accredited” and “observer.” Observers are only included on the mailing list of the Division for Palestinian Rights and can “attend NGO meetings as observers.”

How to get accreditation:

NGOs who wish to be “accredited” or have “observer” status must submit an application form that includes information on their activities and programs “in support of the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people.” The application is submitted to the Division for Palestinian Rights of the UN Secretariat, which then sends it for approval to the UN Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People. The Committee is composed of 26 UN member states, ten of which do not have diplomatic relations with the UN member state of Israel.

In 2017 there are 433 NGOs accredited by the Committee that have been publicly disclosed.

III. Benefits of Accreditation or Association

A. Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) accreditation

To what does it entitle the organization:

Resolution 1996/31 (and with respect to the UN Human Rights Council A/RES/5/1)

ECOSOC-accredited NGOs are entitled to:

- sit as observers at public UN meetings
- submit written statements to various UN bodies
- make oral statements at various UN meetings
- participate in various UN conferences
- consult with UN secretariat officials
- access UN press documentation
- attend informal discussions offered by the UN secretariat
- use UN facilities for meetings (as available and subject to additional rules)

B. Department of Public Information (DPI) association

To what does it entitle the organization:

- grounds passes for activities or events organized by DPI at UN headquarters
- participation in the annual UN DPI/NGO Conference
- participation and contribution to the weekly NGO briefings at UN headquarters
- access to materials, activities and events which promote the work of the United Nations
- access to the Library at UN Headquarters
- use of the DPI /NGO Resource Centre at UN Headquarters

C. Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (CEIRPP) accreditation

To what does it entitle the organization:

- “attend all relevant international meetings and conferences held under the auspices of the Committee and participate in the discussions and to make statements, either orally or in written form.”

- “submit reports, written statements and other relevant documents for circulation among Committee Members and Observers. They will have the opportunity to display, after prior screening by the Secretariat, their own publications at such meetings.”
- “invited to make suggestions regarding the preparation and conduct of civil society events held under the auspices of the Committee.”
- “use these international meetings as a platform to discuss their own initiatives, campaigns, views and ideas.”
- “be consulted by members of the Committee and/or staff of the Division [for Palestinian Rights] on issues related to the question of Palestine.”
- “receive all publications issued by the Division and other relevant information material.”

IV. Promises by UN NGOs in order to get Accreditation or Association

A. Economic and Social Council (ECOSOC) accreditation

What promises or undertakings are required to be entitled to accreditation:

Resolution 1996/31

“The following principles shall be applied in establishing consultative relations with non-governmental organizations:

2. The aims and purposes of the organization shall be in conformity with the spirit, purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations.

3. The organization shall undertake to support the work of the United Nations...

57. The consultative status of non-governmental organizations with the Economic and Social Council and the listing of those on the Roster shall be suspended up to three years or withdrawn in the following cases:

(a) If an organization, either directly or through its affiliates or representatives acting on its behalf, clearly abuses its status by engaging in a pattern of acts contrary to the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations including unsubstantiated or politically motivated acts against Member States of the United Nations incompatible with those purposes and principles...”

Periodic Review

“61... (c) Organizations in general consultative status and special consultative status shall submit to the Council Committee on Non-Governmental Organizations through the Secretary-General every fourth year a brief report of their activities, specifically as regards the support they have given to the work of the United Nations. Based on findings of the Committee's examination of the report and other relevant information, the Committee may recommend to the Council any reclassification in status of the organization concerned as it deems appropriate...”

B. Department of Public Information (DPI) association

What promises or undertakings are required to be entitled to association:

“What are the responsibilities of NGOs associated with DPI?

- To raise public awareness particularly in grass root and rural communities about key issues on the UN agenda including the priorities of the UN Secretary-General...
- Design and implement public information activities and programmes including the printing and dissemination of publications promoting the work of the United Nations...”

Resolution 1297 (XLIV)

“...shall undertake to support the work of the United Nations and to promote knowledge of its principles and activities...”

Annual Review

“Every year [the DPI Committee on NGOs] evaluate[s] associated NGOs to determine if they have fulfilled their association responsibilities... “

C. Committee on the Exercise of the Inalienable Rights of the Palestinian People (CEIRPP) accreditation

What promises or undertakings are required to be entitled to accreditation:

“The criteria for accreditation of NGOs...The NGO should:...

“b. support the Charter of the United Nations, the principles of international law and the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people, primarily its right to self-determination;

“c. have demonstrated that it has concrete programmes or the serious intent to establish such programmes in support of the achievement of the inalienable rights of the Palestinian people.

“Organizations whose mandates preclude advocacy but whose work encompasses humanitarian ends and programmes, including development, benefiting the Palestinian people, are welcome to participate.”

Review

“Accredited civil society organizations have the responsibility to... provide regular feedback to the Committee (through the Division [UN Division on Palestinian Rights]) on their planned and accomplished activities; and submit to the Committee once every four years a formal report detailing their activities on the question of Palestine.”

Breaking the Promises

I. Inciting Hate or Encouraging Antisemitism

The UN accredits and associates with NGOs that espouse antisemitism. The antisemitism takes various forms: demeaning remarks about Jews, abhorrence of the presence of Jews or so-called “Judaization,” minimizing the Holocaust, claiming antisemitism is feigned or grossly exaggerated, attempting to appropriate the language of Jew-hatred and apply antisemitism to Arabs, analogizing Israelis to Nazis, denying that anti-Zionism or the denial of the right of Jewish self-determination is a form of antisemitism, and equating Zionism with racism (see also Section III). One favorite of UN-accredited or associated NGOs is to highlight self-hating Jews or Jewish antisemites, or to represent that this tiny minority are the only liberal and decent Jews.

Here is a sampling of the incitement to hatred against Jews, the promotion of antisemitism, by UN-accredited NGOs.

More than fifty years after the Palestinian people were displaced and dispossessed by an exclusive Jewish state established in Palestine in the aftermath of Nazi atrocities in Europe, Palestinians are still being dispossessed, dispersed, and denied any kind of restitution. Restitution is a universal human right. Persons now fighting for restitution are therefore to be supported.”

II. Condoning or Justifying Violence

The UN accredits and associates with NGOs that condone or justify violence against Jews either inside or outside of Israel. The violent programmatic takes various forms: the reference to killers as martyrs, support for armed or violent struggle or resistance, and the effort to redirect attention away from the violence and justify it by focusing on alleged “causes” of terrorism.

Here is a sampling of condoning, justifying and promoting violent extremism by UN-accredited NGOs.

III. Demonizing the State of Israel

The UN accredits and associates with NGOs that demonize or incite hatred of Israel, hate that in turn encourages violent extremism. The demonization takes various forms including: maintaining Zionism or the right of self-determination of the Jewish people is a form of racism, asserting Israel is an apartheid state, claiming that Israeli Jews are conspiring to destroy Muslim holy sites, charging Israel with extreme crimes – racism, massacres, atrocities, state terrorism, torture, experimenting on prisoners, targeting children, and alleging Israel is guilty of the worst human rights violations known to humankind – genocide, ethnic cleansing, and crimes against humanity.

Here is a sampling of the demonization of the Jewish state by UN-accredited NGOs.

The Israeli regime wanted to purge the land of its indigenous population. One can therefore say that the Palestinians are at the same time victims of the Jewishness and the democracy of Israel.”

IV. Delegitimizing the State of Israel and Seeking the Destruction of the Jewish State

The incitement to hate, the demonization of Israel, and the support for violence has a goal: the destruction of the state of Israel. Sometimes this goal – wiping a Jewish state off the map – is camouflaged, but some UN accredited or associated NGOs are quite clear about their intentions. The UN, therefore, accredits and associates with NGOs that espouse the destruction of a UN member state. This call takes various forms: objections to the creation of Israel, denying a Jewish presence in historic Palestine, rejecting a Jewish historical and religious connection to the land, references not to Israel but to an entity called “Israel/Palestine,” putting references to Israel in quotation marks, images of “Palestine” as all of Israel, calling for a one-state solution, and demanding an alleged “right of return” that would terminate a Jewish state demographically. They also include boycott, divestment or sanction campaigns seeking the economic strangulation of Israel, intending to destroy the viability of Israel on multiple levels, and attempting to fracture the international relationships necessary for the survival of the Jewish state.

Here is a sampling of the delegitimization of the UN member state of Israel by UN-accredited NGOs.
